Electronic Device Used to Grade Eggs

New Method Gives Promise of Revolution.

ITHACA, N. Y. — An electronic method of grading and sorting eggs that is said to hold promise of revolutionizing egg grading, has been invented at Cornell university agricultural experiment station by Prof. Alexis L. Romanoff.

It sorts eggs for internal quality and potential perishability better than present procedures, telling about internal conditions that cannot be seen.

Ordinarily eggs are graded by candling. An egg is held before a light, and the candler observes size of air cell, color and movement of yolk, and clearness of albumen, all of which help to determine the grade.

In the new Romanoff method, the egg is placed into a coil lying in an electromagnetic field of radio frequency. In this field the current passes through the egg, which absorbs the electric power. The power is measured and shows up on a meter.

Good eggs absorb the least power and poor eggs the most. The electronic method does not reveal blood spots if present, making one candling necessary, but it does eliminate several subsequent candling operations, and this would be an immense saving on the billions of market eggs.

In the experimental laboratory equipment the meter shows fine distinctions in egg quality, but for wide use the dial could simply be labeled, "Good, medium, poor," Romanoff said.

The new method is considered close to 100 per cent accurate as compared with the 75 per cent accuracy of the candling system. Cornell Research foundation has received the gift of the patent on the invention. The device is not yet made in a commercial form.

Romanoff came upon the electronic method through research on egg fertility extending back to 1938. In the process of studying thousands of eggs, certain peculiarities were observed, due to quality. Some of the differences between fertile and infertile eggs, for example, were so small that a new method had to be devised to determine them. And thus electronics came to his poultry laboratory.

Divorced 27 Years Ago, Elderly Couple Rewed

LONG BEACH, CALIF. — "I never stopped loving her," said Frank L. Rector, 75, as he applied for a license to remarry Nellie M. Rector, 76, who divorced him 27 years ago.

"Nellie and I both lived in Cleveland," Rector said. "We crossed the lake on the old D.& C. steamship and were married in Detroit September 25, 1897."

They came to Long Beach 46 years ago. After she divorced him, Rector remarried. Since his second divorce, he said, he's been trying to talk Nellie into remarrying him.

Atom Power Station Plan Is Explained in London

LONDON.—Britain's first atomic power station, a huge plant designed to produce electricity from uranium, is to be built at Drigg in Cumberland, the Daily Express said.

Several uranium engines will be set up, the article said, and "plans to have the first engine working within five years have been approved by the cabinet. It is estimated to cost 7,000,000 pounds ($28,000,000)."

"This engine is expected to have a full production output of 75,000 kilowatts, enough to supply light and power to a city the size of Liverpool—the fourth city of the British isles with 855,000 people," the Express said. "If it is a success, other engines will be built at Drigg and a second atomic power station will be set up in Scotland.

"The total output of these two plants should eventually be more than 1,000,000 kilowatts, contributing a quarter of Britain's electrical power needs and saving 5,000,000 tons of coal a year."

More Men in Armies Now Than in '38 at War's Edge

NEW YORK.—Hanson W. Baldwin, military writer, says that almost 10 million men are under arms throughout the world today and that about 40 nations are spending $27,400,000,000 annually for armaments.

Baldwin arrived at those figures through an unofficial world military survey which, he said, indicated that the nations were "spending perhaps 10 billion dollars more on armaments than they did on the eve of war in 1938."

Part of the increase in cost, Baldwin said, is a paper increase due to inflated currency values, but he added that despite the disappearance of Germany and Japan as military powers, more men are in uniform today than in prewar years.

The survey was based on data gathered in foreign countries supplemented by material furnished by U. S. military sources and by representatives of foreign governments here, Baldwin said.

Funeral services for John L. Cates, 22, who died in Baltimore Tuesday afternoon, will be conducted Friday at 11 A.M. from the Memorial Methodist Church. Burial will be in the Babcock Cemetery.

Son of Mrs. J. B. Seignious, Johnny had gone to Johns Hopkins Hospital for an operation last week.

A lovable personality, he endeared himself to young and old alike in Appomattox and his passing cast a shadow of sadness over the entire community. Despite physical handicaps, he maintained a cheerful outlook on life and was devoted to his large circle of friends. We extend deepest sympathy to the bereaved loved ones.

Couple Killed in Auto Smash Are United in 'Black' Wedding

ALBANY, N. Y.—A young couple who died in an automobile crash the day their engagement was to have been announced were united at a "black wedding" before they were buried together.

Johanne Wohl, 20, of Albany, and Norman Saltzburg, 23, of Utica, were killed.

Rabbi Rueben Slonim of Troy performed the old European ceremony before the double funeral.

He said he read the Hebrew marriage writ, omitting references to joy, and placed a ring on the girl's right index finger, as custom dictates. A copy of the writ was put in her casket.

"There was no wine and the ancient custom of the breaking of a glass was not performed," the rabbi said.

He explained that the parents had asked for the "black wedding" and had told him it was their children's last wish.

Minute Make-Ups

By GABRIELLE

In hot, muggy weather you need salt baths. Scrub your body with salt, using a brisk round motion with a body brush. Relax in the warm salt water, then take a shower. Dry yourself and pat on a sweet scented cologne.

Plow Down Cover Crop To Conserve Moisture

To save soil moisture, cover crops should be plowed down as early as possible. Cover crops, especially rye and vetch, grow fast and use a lot of soil moisture during warm days. Iowa State agronomists point out. If plants are allowed to grow too late they will take so much moisture that, without additional rain, there won't be enough to germinate newly planted crops. Nitrogen also will be added to soil.
